

Studio DADO’s refurbishment of the Top Suites aboard Regent Seven Seas Voyager brings a fresh expression of Regent’s signature luxury to 18 of the ship’s most prestigious accommodations.

Completed ahead of the ship’s return to service on May 21, 2026, the project encompasses four Signature Suites, four Grand Suites and ten Seven Seas Suites, each reimagined as a sophisticated private retreat at sea.

The design takes its cues from residential interiors rather than traditional cruise accommodations. Warm woods, natural stone, tailored upholstery and subtle metallic accents establish a rich but restrained material palette, while bespoke millwork, sculptural furnishings, decorative lighting and carefully selected artwork give the suites depth and individuality. Layering texture, pattern and form creates spaces that feel collected and personal rather than overly formal.

Each suite category has its own character while remaining part of a cohesive design story. Studio DADO varied materiality, furnishings and architectural details to create distinct environments that move between relaxed and tailored, organic and refined. Throughout, the design balances contemporary elegance with the sense of timelessness expected of the Regent experience.

At the heart of the refurbishment was a simple idea to create suites that feel as wonderful to live in as they are beautiful to behold. Generous living and dining spaces invite guests to settle in, gather and entertain, while serene bedrooms, beautifully detailed bathrooms and softly integrated lighting create moments of calm and intimacy. Every element from the placement of furniture to the natural flow between spaces and the craftsmanship of bespoke details has been thoughtfully considered around the way guests move, connect and unwind throughout their voyage. The result is an experience that feels effortless and deeply personal; a refined home away from home, shaped by comfort, warmth and an unmistakable sense of luxury.
